Amy Wolf Work Statement:

I am a mixed-media, mostly ceramic artist and make functional and sculptural work, using both hand-built and wheel-thrown techniques, often combining the two. My recent work is figurative and drawn from the personal, relating to ideas of human interconnectedness and self-reflection. My making process is intuitive and exploratory, one where I follow my attention and let the medium/s guide the creation of forms and direction of each piece. My work is more concerned with process and discovery, intending to evoke a powerful mood or emotional/visceral response rather than illustrate a fixed narrative, and allowing the viewer to relate with a piece however they personally connect with it, to find themselves within the work and create their own transportive narrative around it.
